As part of our social responsibility and community outreach initiative, we organized the First Aid Education session in collaboration with Apollo Hospitals on 23rd September 2026 at Ekta Village, as part of the NSS 10-Day Residential Camp. The session aimed to teach the residents basic first-aid techniques through a practical, hands-on approach. It sought to help participants respond safely to common injuries and emergencies, and to build their confidence in handling such situations until professional medical help arrives.

The First Aid Education session was organized to strengthen health awareness and emergency preparedness within the community. The activities allowed participants to learn basic first-aid techniques, including CPR, through hands-on practice. Residents also understood how to react calmly and safely in common emergencies and recognized the importance of timely first response in saving lives. The session further strengthened community health awareness through the collaboration between NSS unit of GIBS and Apollo Hospitals.

The volunteers and residents participated enthusiastically, making the session a meaningful step towards greater safety awareness and community participation. The activity helped volunteers to develop responsibility, teamwork and a stronger sense of social service. The session reinforced the importance of collective efforts in building emergency preparedness, promoting timely first response, and creating a safer and more health conscious community.

The NSS Unit remains committed to organizing such socially impactful activities and encourages continued community participation in future initiative
